What is Dementia?

Dementia is a loss of intellectual functions (such as thinking, remembering and reasoning) that is severe enough to interfere with a person's everyday life. Symptoms may include short-term memory loss, inability to think problems through or complete tasks, confusion, difficulty concentrating, and behavior changes.

Some disorders that can cause dementia include:

- Alzheimer's disease
- Vascular disease
- Lewy Body dementia
- Huntington's disease
- Pick's disease
- Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease
- Parkinson's disease

Other conditions that may cause or mimic dementia include depression, brain tumors, nutritional deficiencies, head injuries, hydrocephalus, infections (AIDS, meningitis, syphilis), thyroid problems and drug reactions.

Dementia is not a part of normal aging.

What is Alzheimer's Disease?

Alzheimer's disease is the most common form of dementia, affecting an estimated 5.4 million Americans, including more than 110,000 in Wisconsin. Alzheimer's disease is a progressive, degenerative disease that attacks the brain and results in impaired memory, thinking and behavior. The ten warning signs of Alzheimer's disease are listed below. There are currently three drugs prescribed to treat the symptoms of mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease and one drug to treat later stage Alzheimer's disease. In some people, these medications may improve daily life by enhancing memory and cognitive ability. Early diagnosis is very important to maximize the effect of available treatment.

10 Warning Signs of Alzheimer's Disease

1. Memory Loss: frequently forgetting important dates, events or phone numbers: not remembering them later.
2. Difficulty performing familiar tasks: forgetting ingredients in recipes, change in ability to balance checkbook or pay bills.
3. Problems with language: forgetting simple words or substituting unusual words.
4. Disorientation to time and place: getting lost in familiar places, not knowing where he/she is, not knowing time of day, day of week, month or year.
5. Poor or decreased judgment: dressing inappropriately, unable to set limits on purchases or giving away large amounts of money.
6. Problems with abstract thinking: forgetting how to use numbers, difficulty reading.
7. Misplacing things: putting things in unusual places like firewood in clothes dryer or purse in the freezer.
8. Changes in mood or behavior: rapid mood swings-from calm to tears to anger- for no apparent reason.
9. Changes in personality: doing things that are out of character, confusion, suspicion or fearfulness.
10. Loss of initiative: very passive, sleeping more than usual or withdrawing from usual activities.

If you recognize several of these warning signs in yourself or a loved one, please see your primary doctor. You may also wish to contact a memory diagnostic clinic for a more thorough evaluation. There are also many conditions that can cause dementia-like symptoms that are reversible if a treatable cause is found. Early diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease or other disorders causing dementia is an important step in getting appropriate treatment, care and support services.

MEMORY DIAGNOSTIC CLINICS

Memory diagnostic clinics offer a comprehensive, team approach to assessment, diagnosis and treatment. The staff at the memory diagnostic clinics are trained to identify the reason you or your loved one are experiencing memory loss or confusion. If you have Medicare, 80% of the cost of the evaluation will be reimbursed and most supplemental insurance policies will pay for the additional 20%. The results of the evaluation will be shared with your primary physician for continued follow-up.

LEGAL SERVICES

Legal and financial planning should begin soon after the diagnosis has been made. Planning involves putting together documents that authorize another person to make necessary health care and financial decisions and reviewing your financial resources. If planning is done early, the person with the disease can actively participate in making the necessary arrangements. It is often a good idea to consult with an attorney who specializes in elder law. A benefit specialist can also guide you in this process.

- To obtain free copies of the basic power of attorney forms, contact:

Persons who appear to be at risk of entering a nursing home are eligible to receive a Family Care assessment and a service plan at no cost. Cost for Family Care services is determined on a case-by-case basis depending on the income, assets and expenditures of the individual needing services. Some people will pay for all or part of the services received, others may have all of their services paid for by Family Care. The cost will be determined before services are provided, so that the individual can decide whether to accept services or not. Some people may have to have their names put on a waiting list due to limited funding.

HOME CARE SERVICES

Home care agencies provide a variety of services to help people in their homes. Some home care agencies specialize in particular services while others provide a wide range of services. Most agencies charge a fee; volunteer organizations accept donations.

Some county aging units also keep lists of private individuals who provide home-care services in their county. It is up to the family to screen any private individual they hire, and to ensure that state and federal tax law is being adhered to. Note that anyone who hires a private individual as a home care worker on a regular or frequent basis may become an employer under the law and be responsible for paying unemployment insurance and social security/Medicare taxes to the government on the worker's behalf.

Using home care services can help to extend the period of time a loved one can be successfully cared for at home by supplying needed supplemental help and preserving the health and energy of the family caregiver.

Types of Home Care Services

Chore services typically include light housekeeping, laundry, meal preparation and shopping.

Companion care (respite) typically includes oversight/companionship for the person with memory loss so that his or her primary caregivers can take time off from caregiving to keep appointments, attend events, catch up on chores, sleep, or simply enjoy a break. Companion care can be provided in a variety of settings, but is usually provided in the residence of the person receiving care. Companion care can often be combined with chore service and/or personal care assistance. Companions might also take people on outings, enabling them to attend events, volunteer, and visit favorite people and places.

Personal care services typically include assistance with dressing, bathing, grooming, meals and toileting, as needed.

Home health care is provided by nurses, certified nursing assistants or professional therapists and includes medication management, skilled nursing services, bathing, and occupational, physical, and speech therapies. Depending on the situation, the caregiver might be able to take a break from caregiving while home health care is being provided.

A live-in caregiver provides 24 hour/day assistance in the home. Services include personal care, home chores, companionship and oversight of the person in need of care. Some people hire someone they know to live in the home. Others look for live-in caregivers through the local university or by placing an advertisement. Some companion care and home health agencies can provide 24 hour/day shift care.

Hospice care: Hospice services are available to individuals at the end of life. Services usually can be provided in the home or in a facility. Some agencies have free-standing hospice in-patient facilities. Hospice provides nursing care, respite, and grief support for families.

ADULT DAY SERVICES

Adult day programs provide structured support for the older person and are another way for a caregiver to obtain respite from caregiving responsibilities. Some programs are dementia specific. FACILITY RESPITE

Respite at residential care facilities may be arranged during the day, for an overnight visit, or multiple day stays. Please contact individual facilities for more details on available respite services at residential facilities.

RESIDENTIAL CARE

There are a variety of facilities including residential care apartment complexes, adult family homes, community based residential facilities and skilled nursing facilities available to meet the different levels of care that may be needed by a person with dementia. When the time comes for a loved one to move to a care facility, it can be very difficult for both the person and the family. In addition, finding the right setting to meet the needs of the person with dementia can be both challenging and time consuming. The Alzheimer's & Dementia Alliance has a booklet available called Residential Care: A Guide For Choosing a New Home that provides several tips and examples of questions to ask as you search for a care facility. Please call 1-888-308-6251 for your free copy.

- Residential Care Apartment Complex (RCAC)

A residential care apartment complex is an apartment that includes a kitchen, living area, bedroom, private bathroom and an array of services including meals, housekeeping, laundry, arranging medical appointments and transportation. RCACs may provide up to 28 hours per week of personal care and/or nursing services. These facilities are most appropriate for a person with dementia who is in the very early stages, who can make their own decisions regarding care options, and who can live independently with minimal assistance, or for the person with dementia and his or her spouse together. These facilities are registered by the Wisconsin Department of Health & Family Services.

There are no Residential Care Apartment Complex listings at the time of this printing.*

○ Adult Family Homes (AFH)

Adult Family Homes also combine housing and care. Adult Family Homes provide assistance and/or supervision with activities of daily living to 4 or fewer individuals. No more than 7 hours per week of nursing care can be given in an AFH. These facilities are licensed by the Department of Health & Family Services.

○ Nursing Homes

Nursing homes offer skilled nursing care and other services including: 3 meals per day, snacks, activities, assistance with activities of daily living, and dietician and social work services. Nursing homes are larger than either Community Based Residential Facilities or Adult Family Homes. They are most appropriate for frail individuals who have medical or nursing care needs. Some nursing homes have special care units designed to address the needs of people with dementia. Individuals who meet federal income requirements and need skilled nursing care may qualify for financial assistance.
