Working with young-onset dementia: It’s okay to ask for help

It is estimated that as many as 640,000 Americans have young-onset dementia, which means having symptoms of dementia prior to age sixty-five. People affected by young-onset dementia are often in their prime working years, and the first signs of cognitive changes may be recognized on the job. These changes, however, do not necessarily mean the end of employment.

One of the objectives of the Alzheimer’s & Dementia Alliance of Wisconsin (ADAW) is to help people with a dementia-type disease continue living active and engaged lives. ADAW convened a work group of people diagnosed with young-onset dementia who were still in the workforce or who had left because of the diagnosis. This group provided suggestions to help others successfully navigate the challenges of continued employment with a dementia diagnosis.

• It’s okay to ask for help was one of the best pieces of advice this group offered. Alzheimer’s disease, the most common form of young-onset dementia, is considered a disability and is covered under the American with Disabilities Act. This means an employer is obligated to conduct an interview with the employee to discuss ways the employee can remain in his or her position.

• The employee and supervisor, along with a Human Resource staff person, should evaluate current strengths. Identify what aspects of the job are done well and where assistance might be helpful. Finding common ground on how to address the most pressing needs will lead to greater success in the long run. The goal is to agree to a change in responsibilities in the job based on the person’s strengths and re-assign the areas of weakness to other colleagues.

• Discuss what reasonable accommodations would help the employee be successful on the job. The human resources office or employee assistance program can be valuable in identifying resources and assist in planning for the future. One of the most basic is adjusting the work schedule to accommodate the employee’s most productive time of day. This may mean a change to fewer work hours. It’s also important to look at the work environment. Too much noise or a work space that is too open may cause distractions.

• Is the employee open to natural supports? Colleagues doing similar work can become the mentor, providing support when confusion arises; offering cues about timelines on projects; discussing daily tasks or even partnering up for meetings. In some cases, employees divide responsibilities based on individual strengths. For example a truck driver with young-onset dementia is no longer able to drive so instead he loads and unloads the truck while a colleague drives.

• Would assistive technologies be appropriate and welcome? These are products or equipment that can be used to maintain or improve functional capabilities. Certain computer functions and software programs can be used for reminders or to set start and end times for specific tasks. Keep in mind that the person who is not comfortable with computers may not benefit from these types of programs.

• Cognitive abilities can vary within each day and change from day to day. What works for one person may not work for the next. It is important to hold frequent evaluations, especially early on.

While various types of dementia may affect individuals in different ways, the person with young-onset dementia is often high functioning and retains many skills and abilities from years of employment experience. While the employee may have difficulty remembering new things or may need memory aids to track time and tasks, their vast knowledge of an organization’s mission and services are valuable.

Dear Friends,

At a recent meeting of our vibrant men’s support group, a newer member wondered how all dollars raised could stay in Wisconsin when donations go to a post office box in Washington, D.C. Several members immediately said that means the money doesn’t support the Alzheimer’s & Dementia Alliance of Wisconsin. Keeping dollars local to support Wisconsin families is exactly why we chose to become an independent, Wisconsin-based organization in late 2009, disaffiliating from the national association. Dozens of former chapters nationwide have subsequently followed our early lead.

When making charitable contributions, the organization’s name means everything, and sound-alike names can cause significant confusion. If it doesn’t say Alzheimer’s & Dementia Alliance of Wisconsin (ADAW) with a Madison address (or sometimes Lancaster or Portage, where we have regional offices), it isn’t us and we receive no benefit.

When you make a donation or include ADAW in your estate plans, please keep all of the following in mind:

• Every dollar you give stays local, helping you, your family, and those you know and care about who are affected by any form of dementia. This newsletter is filled with information on direct service programs so you can see your dollars at work each and every day.

• Designated research dollars go directly to the dedicated research scientists at the Wisconsin Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center at UW-Madison.

• We don’t use your charitable donations to support massive expenses associated with national advertising campaigns or direct mail marketing, and we never share your name or address with other organizations or companies.

• We advocate nationally and statewide for funding for direct care support and dementia research. We are proud of our record of public policy successes spanning nearly twenty years.

• Our well-regarded programs have been developed over many years by Wisconsin dementia experts, and we use ongoing evaluation techniques to ensure we meet the needs of the thousands of families we serve.

• We help folks throughout the state via our toll-free number, and our efforts to serve Wisconsin through local dementia coalitions are being recognized nationally. We are busy preparing to expand direct services to the greater Beloit area and Adams, Juneau, Marquette, Green Lake and Waushara counties.

I hope these points provide you with the confidence and knowledge needed so you are assured all donations received are used wisely to benefit your local community.

For over thirty years, ADAW has been serving families in the best ways possible as we work for a cure or more effective treatments. Your contributions help us do even more so we collectively can ensure individuals with dementia and care partners have the assistance they need and deserve along the journey.

Sincerely,

Paul Rusk, Executive Director
ADAW extends a special thank you to the planning committee and community advisory board for making the 7th Annual Solomon Carter Fuller Community Conversation on Alzheimer’s Disease another huge success. Over 100 people attended the Friday night lecture by Dr. Keith Whitfield, Provost of Wayne State University and noted expert on aging, which focused on Alzheimer’s disease and healthy cognitive aging among African American men. Dr. Whitfield addressed the impact of life stress on cognitive and physical well-being and emphasized the importance of taking care of you as the caregiver.

The theme continued at Saturday’s Memory Screening event as Keretha Cash, Jewelline Wiggins and Reverend Alex Gee shared their stories of caring for a parent with dementia during a panel discussion. They stressed the need to take time away from caregiving responsibilities. In addition, panelists talked about accepting what other siblings are willing and able to do for an aging parent and the importance of cultural competency in care facilities, illustrating the importance of sharing a loved one's life story with caregivers in a professional setting so care can be tailored to specific needs based on experiences.

The event is held each February in honor of Black History Month and celebrates Dr. Solomon Carter Fuller, a pioneer in Alzheimer’s disease research and the first African American psychiatrist.

ADAW will have an official outreach office in Beloit soon! We recently signed a lease for office space in downtown Beloit, in the former Chester’s Department Store, replacing our office in the Merrill Community Center, which closed last fall. We’re excited about the opportunity this gives us to provide services to local families. Watch for open house details coming soon.

Notes from Outreach Staff

We continue to see attendance increase at the Memory Cafés in Platteville and Sinsinawa Mound. Participants have enjoyed music and memories, making homemade bread, exploring our heritage and even had a visit from Santa and Mrs. Claus. Over the summer and fall months, we hope to explore local attractions. If you haven’t attended, I encourage you to get connected to a Memory Café!

Education is an important component to successful caregiving. In the last several months I’ve offered community education programs throughout my service area - reaching out to the communities of Boscobel and Cuba City. I’ll be presenting Understanding & Responding to Behavior Changes on Wednesday, May 24 in Dickeyville and on Wednesday, June 21 in Prairie du Chien. (See program calendar for details.) In October, 2017 I will be back in Boscobel discussing how to plan for the holidays.

Health fairs are often the first place people go to seek information and by attending these fairs, I am able to connect with individuals and care partners to share information about ADAW’s local programs and services, including the many support groups we offer and the network of memory diagnostic clinics across Wisconsin. We are fortunate to have two memory diagnostic clinics close by, the Southwest Health Memory Diagnostic Clinic in Platteville and the Richland Area Geriatric Assessment Clinic in Richland Center. Staff at these clinics are experts in differentiating the various types of dementia, a best-practice standard in the state of Wisconsin. This helps families get on the best path for their specific situation. ADAW works alongside to support the person receiving the diagnosis and the care partners, sharing our county-specific local resource guides offering dementia-specific information.

As a member of the Grant County Interdisciplinary Team, I collaborate with other agencies to bring programs and speakers to Grant County like ADAW’s informative Legal & Financial Planning Seminar. On a quarterly basis, I am connecting with other lead agencies in the area of elder abuse (physical, emotional, or financial.) This is often a confusing and difficult area to navigate, but ADAW can help care partners get the appropriate support.

Through area Dementia Friendly Community (DFC) efforts, I was able to assist in training Walgreens in Platteville and Prairie du Chien in becoming dementia friendly. Over the last few years I provided training to Lancaster City Police, Grant County Sherriff’s Department and on-going training to Dominican Sisters-Sinsinawa. Whitney Thompson, Dementia Care Specialist with the ADRC, and I co-facilitated the training of Platteville City Police Department. This is an on-going grassroots initiative. I’m also working on similar efforts in Crawford and Richland counties. Watch for future updates!

My work with the Grant County Dementia Care Network, a group of Grant County professionals, aims to build an educated community poised to support people with dementia and their families through information, assistance, and direct services. The Dementia Care Network is instrumental in planning the Grant County Alzheimer’s Walk and the annual Understanding Alzheimer’s Disease, Dementia and Memory Loss Workshop in Fennimore. In the past 18 years, the workshop informed over 2000 professionals and family caregivers from the surrounding areas on dementia-relevant topics.

Becky DeBuhr, Outreach Specialist

Serving Crawford, Grant and Richland counties. Though Becky primarily works out of our satellite office in Lancaster, she holds office hours on Tuesdays at the Richland Center ADRC and Richland Area Geriatric Assessment Clinic.
We are listening to you!

When we ask what is most important to you in terms of policy, the two items cited the most are respite and research. I’m pleased to report we are making progress on both issues. In 2010, Governor Doyle provided seed funding for the University of Wisconsin to apply to become a federally funded Alzheimer’s Research Center which led to the creation of the Wisconsin Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center (W-ADRC) at UW-Madison. ADAW collected letters from Wisconsin’s Congressional Delegation in support of the original application as well as the reauthorization application. Governor Walker in this budget has added an additional $100,000 for the W-ADRC to perform additional research aimed at discovering new treatments and ultimately a cure for Alzheimer’s disease. We very much appreciate the Governor including this funding in the State Budget bill.

On the respite front, we were able to pass a bill that increased funding for the Alzheimer’s Family Caregiver Support Program (AFCSP) in Wisconsin by $1,000,000. That increase is the largest increase the program has received since its creation in 1985 but it is not enough. In Dane County a waiting list for this important respite funding has already started as of late April. It’s important to us that family caregivers are able to take care of themselves as well as the person for whom they provide care. AFCSP allows caregivers to have some time to take care of themselves so they don’t get ill or burn out as a result of their caregiving duties.

We are also asking the State to create a new tax credit for caregivers. Family caregivers provide a benefit to the State by delaying facility care, and we are asking lawmakers to recognize that benefit by providing a tax credit targeted for those caregivers. I have been working for several years to educate legislators both in Wisconsin and in Washington D.C. about the benefit and the necessity of incentivizing home care over facility care for both the economy and families coping with dementia.

We recognize that nursing homes and community-based residential facilities provide a vital service and there are situations where facility care may be a better option than home care, especially in the later stages of the disease, but this should not be the only option for families. We want to ensure that families have the supports needed to care for someone in the home whenever that is possible and in the best interest of both the person with dementia and their caregivers.

If these issues are important to you, I advise you to contact your State Representative and State Senator urging them to support funding for research and respite for family caregivers. When communicating with your legislators, either in person or in writing, please remind them of the need to incentivize home care over facility care and remind them that this is in the best interests of people with dementia, their families and our economy.

Lastly I want to thank you for your support. Without you, we wouldn’t be able to advocate on behalf of your loved ones.

Rob Gundermann, Public Policy Director
Outreach Coordinator Deanna Truedson is leaving the Alzheimer’s & Dementia Alliance of Wisconsin at the end of the month. Deanna has been with ADAW for over 16 years and her impact on this agency is beyond measure, from working with community partners to establishing the Grant County Dementia Care Network and the Green County Caregiver Group to starting Memory Cafes and everything in between. While the majority of her time is focused on Green, Lafayette and Iowa counties, her influence has been felt through all the communities ADAW serves. Deanna helped launch the region’s first Alzheimer’s Walks, known then as Memory Walks, and the state’s first Memory Café, both in Sauk County. She managed the National Family Caregiver Support Program for Lafayette County; supervised ADAW’s county outreach specialist; assisted with grant development; led the development of the annual Understanding Alzheimer’s Disease workshops in Fennimore and Monroe, bringing well-known dementia speakers to rural communities, and expanding ADAW’s educational offerings beyond urban settings to other parts of the state.

Her compassion and dementia knowledge have helped countless families manage the challenges of their dementia journeys. We wish Deanna the best of luck as she pursues new experiences in her career.

Diversity Coordinator Charlie Daniel is leaving ADAW after more than seven years working to raise awareness of Alzheimer’s disease and dementia among African Americans and connecting families with the research programs at the Wisconsin Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center (W-ADRC) at UW-Madison. Charlie encouraged families to talk about their experiences and connected caregivers with resources that can make the journey a little easier. She was instrumental in organizing the first Solomon Carter Fuller Memory Screening Day, now in its eighth year, and developed two vibrant community advisory boards, in Beloit and Madison, which continue to assist with community outreach and plan annual outreach events like the Solomon Carter Fuller and the Regina Prude events. She will assist with the establishment and staffing of the new Beloit office through June before taking a new position with Safe Communities as their new falls prevention and drug poisoning program coordinator.

She is a tireless advocate for improving the health and well being of people in our community and will continue to do so in her new position. Thank you, Ms. Charlie, for all you’ve done for individuals impacted by Alzheimer’s or other dementias and for your vast contributions to ADAW. You will be missed!

Development Updates

Alzheimer’s Walk Season has begun!

Like “opening day” at baseball stadiums across the country, ADAW has our own special season, “walk season,” and it has officially started! It is always an exciting and busy time of year. The Alzheimer’s Walks are important to ADAW for many reasons:

- Alzheimer’s Walks bring communities together to support people impacted by Alzheimer’s disease and other forms of dementia.
- Alzheimer’s Walks allow people to share their stories and raise awareness; helping others and in some cases, helping their own healing.
- Alzheimer’s Walks are ADAW’s largest fundraisier. All dollars raised at our Alzheimer’s Walks stay in Wisconsin allowing us to provide support to people impacted by Alzheimer’s disease and other forms of dementia through care consultations, family meetings, caregiver support groups, Memory Cafés and other early stage programs, family education presentations, and so much more - all supported by generous donations.

What’s new with Alzheimer’s Walks in 2017?

- Updated Walk-specific websites that are more user and mobile friendly.
- Children’s T-shirts as part of the Fundraising Rewards Program.
- A “Support the Journey” option that allows you to decline your earned incentive prizes permitting the cost of those prizes to support ADAW’s mission.

Have your participated in or supported an Alzheimer’s Walk before? Thank you! We hope you’ll join us again.

New to the Alzheimer’s Walks? Join us, we’d love to have you! There are many opportunities for involvement including: join a planning committee, form a team, walk as an individual, support someone else’s efforts with a donation, or volunteer at the event.

Volunteer Spotlight

Alyssa Gosbee Stang, marketing consultant and UW Madison lecturer, has been assisting ADAW with branding and marketing. Alyssa has a family connection to Alzheimer’s disease and has been instrumental in helping us with our expansion into new areas of Wisconsin. We are grateful for her willingness to meet with our leadership team and facilitate an ADAW staff retreat. We look forward to working with Alyssa on future projects and appreciate her vast experience as we move forward as an organization.

In Memoriam: Trish Vradenburg 1946 - 2017

We are saddened by the sudden loss of a tremendous Alzheimer’s advocate, Trish Vradenburg. Trish, and her husband George, invested a great deal of their own time and money to fund Alzheimer’s initiatives across the country and around the world, raising millions of dollars for Alzheimer’s research and advocacy. Trish had been a family caregiver for her mother, Bea, before she and George started the national advocacy organization USAgainstAlzheimer’s.

We will greatly miss her Alzheimer’s advocacy efforts and her infectious smile. Last September, Trish and George joined ADAW when we met with Speaker Paul Ryan in Washington DC as part of USAgainstAlzheimer’s legislative advocacy summit. More recently, Trish and George joined Public Policy Director Rob Gundermann for an interview with ADAW Board Member Carol Koby on her radio program All About Living. We wish George and his family the best at this difficult time.

Lois, diagnosed with young-onset mild cognitive impairment and a participant in our Meeting of Minds group, shared this beautifully written poem

To my Meeting of Minds Friends

Why - why not?
Complicated – simple
Darkness – stars
Empty – full
Sad – happy
Tired – alert
Old in some ways – young at heart
Cold – warm
Cry – laugh
You and me – friends
Thank you for your gifts for these past months.

Time For Us Camp

A great camp opportunity for teens, 10 - 18 years of age, who have a loved one with Alzheimer’s disease, Parkinson’s, Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, or similar Memory/cognitive challenges, to connect with peers in similar situations. While most of each day is spent on fun camp activities - ropes challenge, tower climbing, canoeing, water sports, field sports - a portion of the time focuses on an understanding of Alzheimer’s and memory challenges.

Sunday, June 11 - Friday, June 16, 2017
